Unconditional Love: It Takes One to Know One

"Until you make peace with who you are, you'll never be content with what you have." - Doris Mortman

I first read this quote in Sarah Ban Breathnach's wonderful book, Simple Abundance. Quite frankly, I don't know who Doris Mortman is, but I think she is really on to something. And to elaborate on a point, we could even expand her quote by adding, "...you'll never be content with what you have..." and who you love.

One of the concepts that I had difficulty processing in learning about the Law of Attraction is that if "like attracts like," then in so many relationships why does it appear that "opposites attract"? The irony is that even in those cases one party, or both, are attracting what he or she is focusing on in his or her own life. In other words, the shy woman who wishes that she were more outspoken, attracts a mate who is outspoken; or the man who wishes he was more giving attracts someone who is a giving machine. The problem is, often times the attractor stays the same, still longing for a change, wishing for the desired qualities.

Mahatma Gandhi said, "Be the change you want to see." If you really take Gandhi's words to heart, you will realize that You are the power. You alone are the driving force in your life. It's not necessary to look outside of yourself, intentionally or unintentionally, for what you want to be, do, have or achieve. And if that makes you uncomfortable, listen to this: You Are Perfect Just As You Are! You don't have to lose 30 pounds, get a graduate degree, buy a nicer home, make more money, get a promotion, or whatever. You are what you are now and that is just fine. Really, better than fine—it's GREAT! Love yourself; embrace yourself for what you are now, in this moment.

Now, if you choose to make changes in your life, go ahead, change away. But love yourself along the way. If you want to lose 30 pounds, don't look at your body and hate the way you look. Find something to appreciate about yourself just the way you are and focus on that. What is your best feature? Beautiful eyes, a warm smile, great legs or a tiny waist? Give thanks for what you are right now, and from that appreciative place take inspired action and be the change you want to see. Eat healthier, exercise, drink more water to nourish and honor your body, and love the skin you're in!

Use this method for anything that you choose to change in your life. The bonus prize is that when you love yourself unconditionally, you will not put conditions on the people you love.

"Learning to love yourself is the greatest love of all," advises Lyricists Linda Creed and Michael Masser. Your happiness will not depend on your loved ones acting in a certain way; your happiness will depend on you!

We've added a new monthly feature to our Manifesting Thoughts newsletter—a free H♥artivations™ mini-poster! It combines words and art that speak to the Heart. Don't miss it on Page 3!

Manifesting

Art for Kids

In the spirit of Valentine's Day this February, give your child an opportunity to focus on relationships with friends and family. If your child participated in our "Heart Projects for Kids" last month, have her use the friends/family section on her vision board. If not, have her choose something she would like to accomplish with friends or family.

Once he has visualized what he would like to have, it is time for him to release it to the Universe and act as if he already has it. One way to do this is to take a picture of your child doing what he wants to manifest. For example, if your child would like to work on sharing, take a picture of him sharing a toy with a friend or relative. If pictures were used to create the vision board last month, find or take a picture of your child looking really happy and glue it in the middle of the vision board. Placing your child's vision board or the picture that you took of your child where he will see it often, will give him the feeling that he already has the relationships that he desires, and by the Law of Attraction, he will!

N O W .

We are not living in eternity.

We have only this moment,

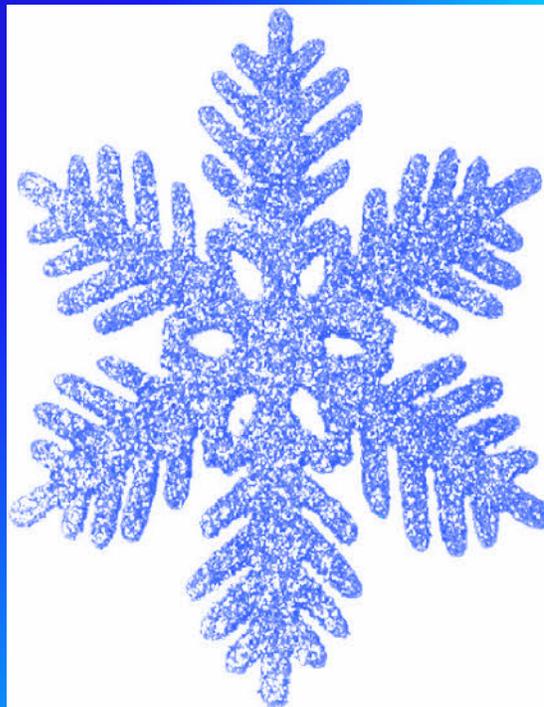

sparkling like a star

in our hand—

and melting like a

Snowflake.

How to Use Your H♥artivations™ Mini-Poster

This quote really brings home the power of living in the present moment—not yesterday or tomorrow, but TODAY, and RIGHT NOW!

See yourself in the hub of the snowflake and assign a different part of your life to each of the ovals that surround it, such as Health, Family/Friends, Work, Wealth, Relationships, Travel, Spiritual, Giving Back, Entertainment, etc. We are all as unique as snowflakes, so make these categories relevant to your life and how you would like to enhance it. Choose one area that appeals to you the most right now and focus on it with the intent of doing one action that you can take today...now...to enhance that area of your life. Notice the way the snowflake branches out and realize that every action you take, no matter how small, extends outward and expands.

The idea here is not to overwhelm yourself with changing these six areas of your life, but to embrace the philosophy of the Law of Attraction that says that focusing on anything—even for as little as 17 seconds—expands it and generates “inspired” action.

For the next five days go to the next area, focus on it and do one small thing to enhance it, progressing all the way around the center of the hub. On the seventh day, take notice of any changes that have occurred and give thanks for them and then restart the whole process the following day.

Note: All of Heart Projects’ Manifesting® products feature 17 beads that will help you to focus and direct your thoughts in this exercise. Please visit our website at: www.Manifesting.us.
